Long time ago, communication in Uganda was not easy. There were no quick means of communication. People would travel long distances to deliver messages. They would even go there on foot. The youths were always sent because they were strong and could move long distances. Such messages taken were death announcements, invitation cards, etc.

Today, communication has been made easy. With the introduction of a telephone one sends a message or calls from one place and in seconds, the message has reached. Different telecommunication companies like MTN, Airtel Uganda, Uganda Telecom and Orange have introduced their SIM cards that connect people. They have built their network masts on hills to boost their network systems.

Communication has also been greatly improved with the introduction of electronic media. This type of media includes televisions, radios and the internet. However, electronic media can't work in the absence of electricity. That's why most people in rural areas do not have televisions.
