Sleeping in my bed, I was awoken by foot stamps in my sitting room. I had left the Television on and wrestling was being broadcast so I thought they had stopped abt. little did I know that he was a thief. The thief took it an advantage of the unlocked door and stealthily walked in.

He did not turn the volume down instantly so it was hard to notice. He unplugged it from the socket and went away with it. Had it not been his foolishness that made him to come back for the aerial, I wouldn't have caught him. Fortunate enough when he came back I had woken up and realized that my Television set had been stolen. Still looking for what to do, I heard footsteps near the entrance. I hid behind the door to let him enter. He entered and stretched his hand for the aerial, I quickly ran out, shut the door and made an alarm for help.

Stranded in the house, he hid in the ceiling people came opened the house and searched it but nowhere to be seen. It was the squeaking of the mice which became intense in the ceiling that opened our eyes. We ordered him to get out or else we would smoke him out. We tortured him till he took us where he had hidden my Television. We found many other stolen items waiting to be sold.

Whereas I am born of man,
But left to store at bricks and stones,
No shelter nor food for me,
Tatters I call my clothes.

I, poor child!
On streets I sleep and rest,
In garbage heaps I compete with dogs and vultures,
To get leftovers from the well to do people.

I wouldn't have learnt bad habits,
But the harsh conditions confuse me,
I start smoking bhang to feel high,
I snatch bags, phones and money to survive.

Oh, poor child!
Why? But why?
Can't anyone help, to take me off the streets?
And I also live a desirable life?
