Domestic Violence

The night was as silent as a deserted cemetery except for the buzzing of mosquitoes, croaking of frogs and hooting of owls from a distance probably spelling out evil spirits at night. No sooner had we slept than we heard the search of breaks. This was certainly father who usually came at night completely drunk. I sprang out of bed leaving my blanket swirling in a chaotic matter. I tiptoed slowly towards the window, father was staggering awkwardly singing in a deep voice, "Bakuzala Mubala" which was his favourite song that meant born in the bar."

Suddenly, a loud bang was heard. Father had certainly kicked the door and it was broken into small uncountable pieces. My mother completely started dashed towards the door, her heart throbbing with mighty beats. "You stupid woman, how long do you take to open the door?" My father inquired from mother menacingly. "Is this the kind of life you expect me to lead after making me discontinue with my education?" Mother asked as tears rolled down her rosy cheeks.

Nonsense! You're good for nothing. There is nothing you are telling me. Bring me food. My mother being sober obeyed and without dilly- dallying, lay the table with posho and vegetables. "Is this what you give me? Am I a beggar to eat such food? Give me food, father roared thus making us more frightened. From his sitting position, father came burning with fury, took the bowl of vegetables and threw it right on mother's face. "Today is today, I am going to teach you a lesson," mother said, her heart mounting courage. Before father could cut once more, mother took the plate of posho and hit him right on his wide open nostrils making him fall with a thud on the cosy mossy floor.

That was the time hell broke loose. Mother began beating up father. Up he was ready to defend himself, since he was drunk, I thought it was easier for mother to beat him up but however hard she tried she could not manage. "Beat him! Teach him manners!" my little brother shouted running towards the kitchen. I was astonished to see him back with a mingling stick. My young brother James, my father's apple of the eye began beating up father on his bottoms. There was nothing I could do but watch the drama which was unfolding as pangs of sadness surged through my body.

Everywhere I go
I find noble men and women
Who are even ready to catch cockroaches
And maintain law and order

Each minute that passes by Sees three men and women very busy
Dealing with thieves murders
And child abuses

No single day goes past
Without those men and women
Handling bad road uses
By arresting and charging them accordingly
I thank these men and women so much
Because the country would be infected with criminal
Long live our committed police officer
